

BRAND IDENTITY · VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA

Zameen Art House زمین

A complete identity for an art house in Vancouver — built from the Persian word for earth.

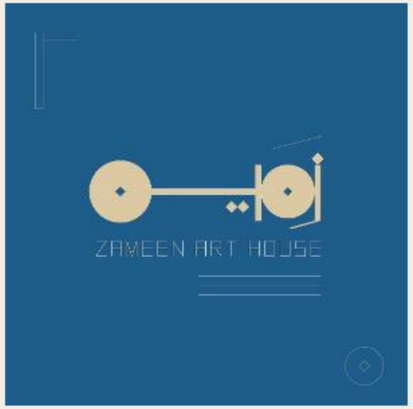

CLIENT	Zameen Art House
SCOPE	Full identity, from concept to social
DESIGNER	Setayesh Ganji

BEFORE YOU START

How to read this file

Thirteen boards in four parts. The story follows the order the identity was built in: first the word, then the forms drawn from it, then the colours and the rules, then the identity at work.

01 – 03 Introduction
The client, the brief and what the name means.

04 – 07 The mark
How the Persian word زمین became a logotype, a symbol and a Latin wordmark.

08 – 09 Colour and language
Three colours and the drafting lines that hold every layout together.

10 – 13 In use
One logo stretched across three posts, the Instagram grid, and credits.

01 — THE BRIEF

A home where creativity takes root

Zameen Art House is an art house in Vancouver, British Columbia — "a home to celebrate art, culture, and community, where creativity takes root and connections blossom."

They commissioned a complete identity from zero: a mark that carries a Persian name in a Canadian city, reads clearly to people who do not read Persian, and can grow into a whole visual language for exhibitions, events and social media.

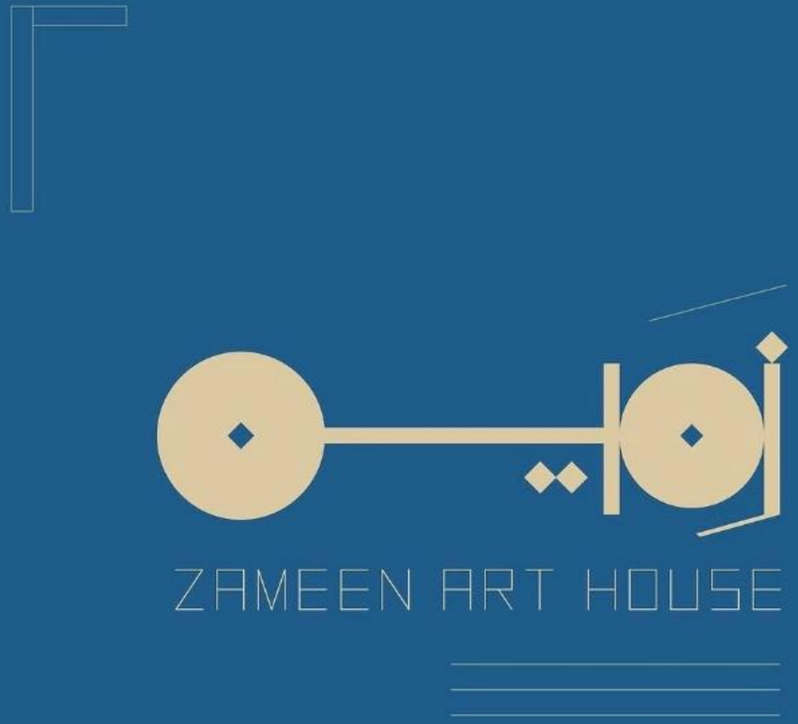

NAME	Zameen — زمین — Persian for "earth"
MOTTO	Creativity takes root, connections blossom
SCOPE	Logotype, symbol, Latin wordmark, colour, graphic language, social media

02 — THE NAME

زمین

zameen /zæ'mi:n/ noun — earth, ground, land

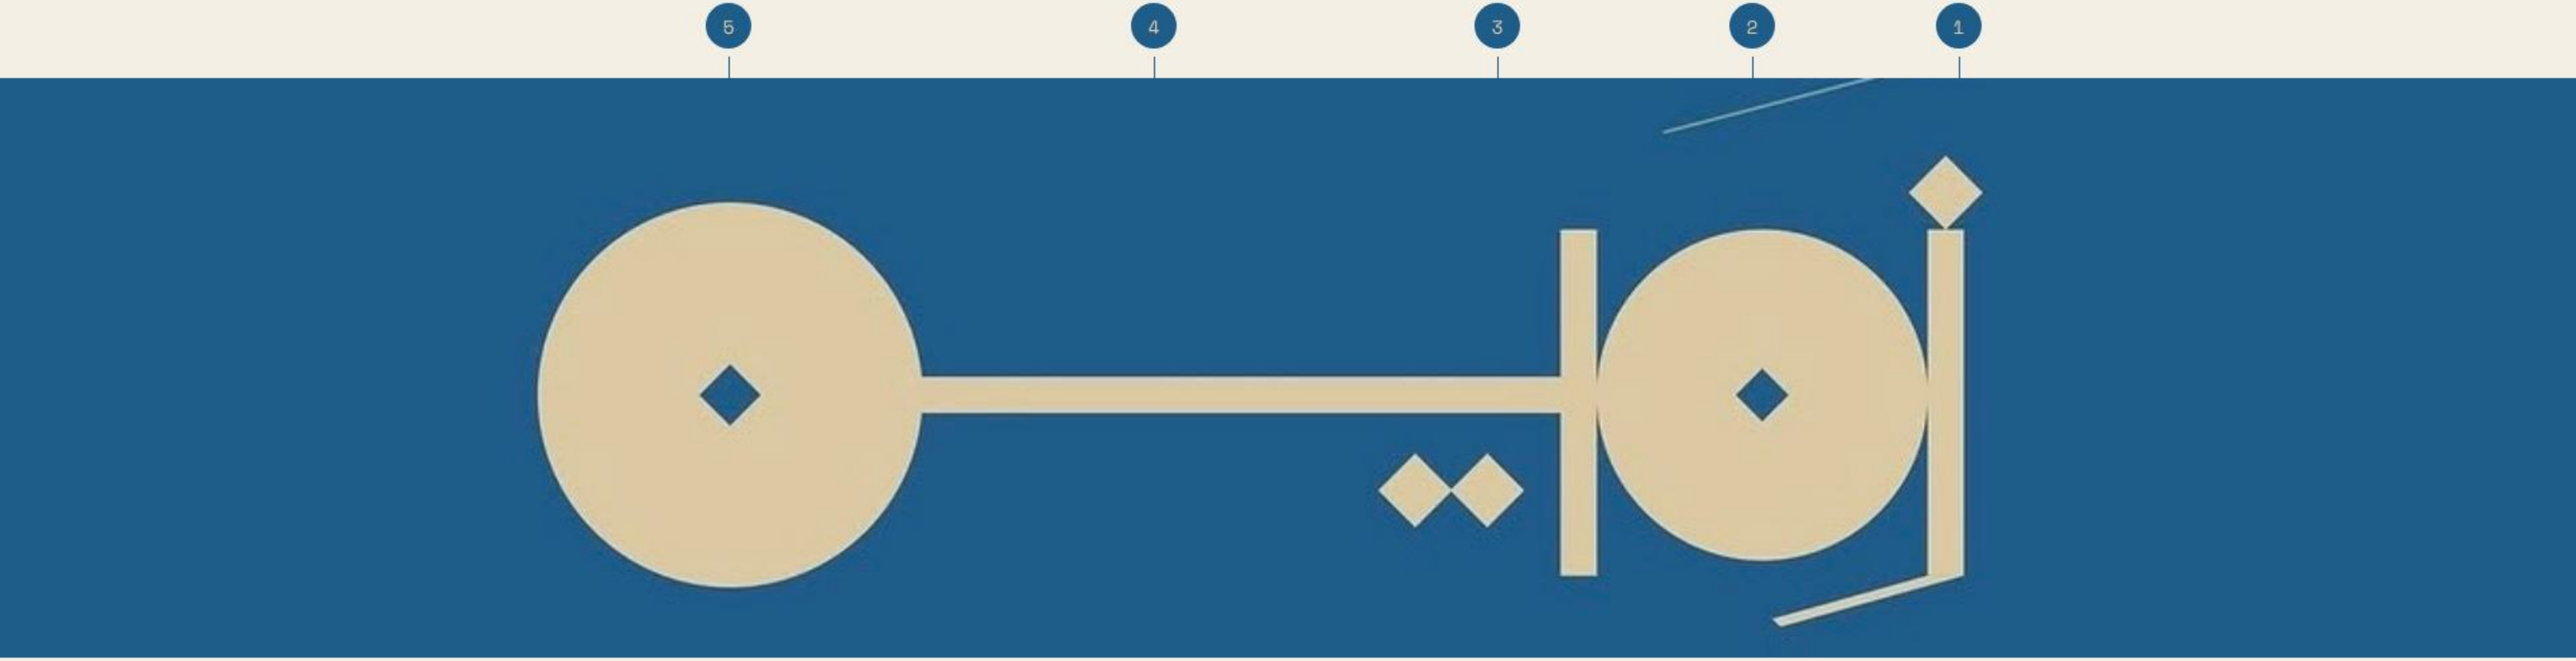

Earth is where things are planted, where roots hold and where people gather. The name already contained the brief — so the logo starts from the word itself, written in Persian, rather than from a picture of the earth.

03 — LOGOTYPE

Writing زمین with a compass and a ruler

The logotype is the Persian word, written right to left, using only three shapes: the circle, the straight stroke and the diamond. Every letter is where a Persian reader expects it — yet each is reduced until it also reads as pure geometry to anyone else.

5 · NUN ن

A second circle closes the word, its dot set inside.

4 · KESHIDEH —

The stretched stroke of Persian script, drawn as a horizon line.

3 · YE ی

One upright tooth and the two diamond dots below it.

2 · MIM م

A full circle: the earth itself, with a seed at its centre.

1 · ZE ز

A diamond dot over a stroke that drops and turns — the planted stem.

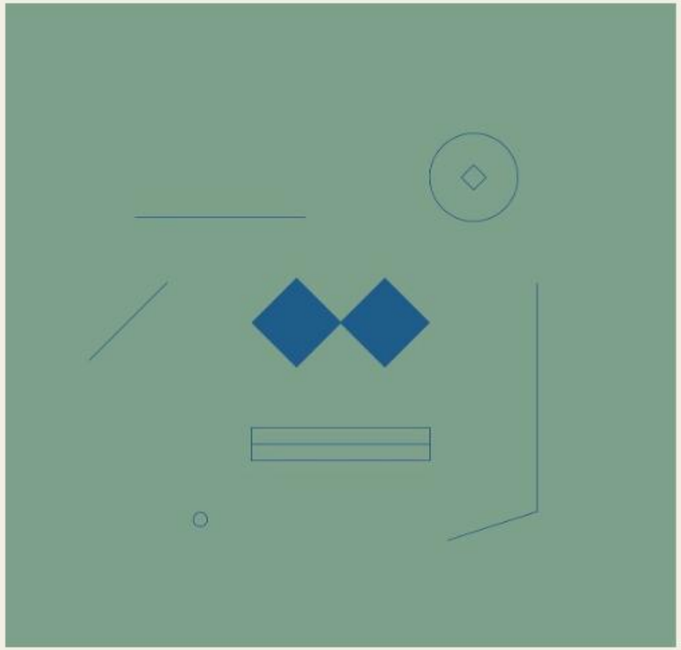

04 — TWO FORMS

A circle and a seed

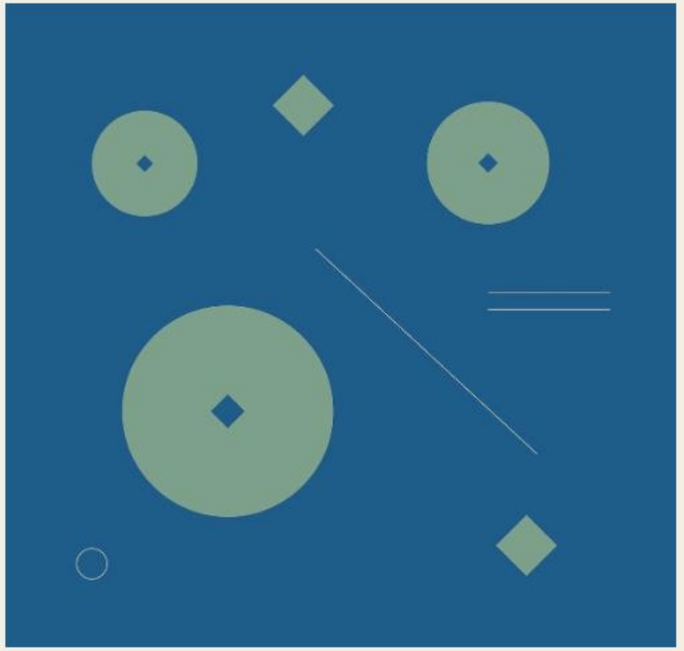

The diamond comes straight from Persian calligraphy. The dot — nuqta — is cut by the reed pen as a small rhombus, and calligraphers use it as the unit that measures every letter. Here it becomes the identity's smallest part: the dots of the letters, the centre of every circle, and a seed.

The circle is the earth — the name made visible. With a diamond at its centre it reads as a seed held in the ground, or a planet with its core.

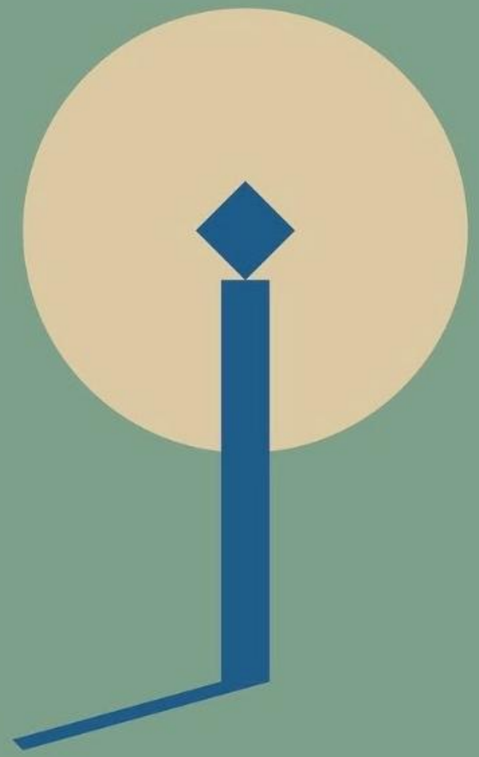

Together they carry the motto: something planted, about to grow.

The nuqta — two diamond dots

Circles, each with a seed at the centre

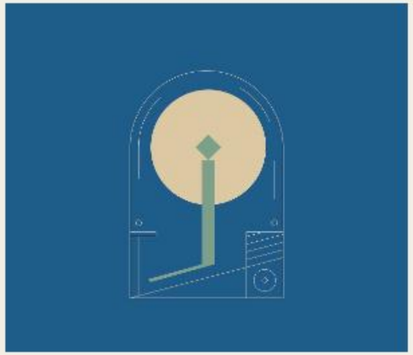

ZAMEEN ART HOUSE

05 — SYMBOL

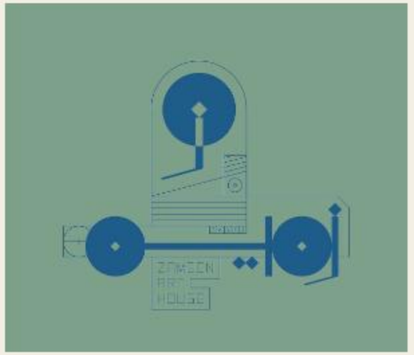

Planted

The symbol takes the first two letters — the ze and the circle of the mim — and stands them upright. The diamond dot becomes a seed, the stroke grows down out of it and turns at the foot like a root finding ground, and the circle rises behind it like a sun.

Placed inside a tall arch, the same symbol becomes a doorway: the “house” in Zameen Art House, and a form shared by Persian architecture and gallery walls alike.

The symbol in its doorway

Symbol and logotype, combined

06 — LATIN WORDMARK

ZAMEEN ART HOUSE

For the English name, a monoline square capital with the same even weight as the thin construction lines. Its A is drawn without a crossbar, flat-topped, so the letters feel built from the same rulers as the Persian mark.

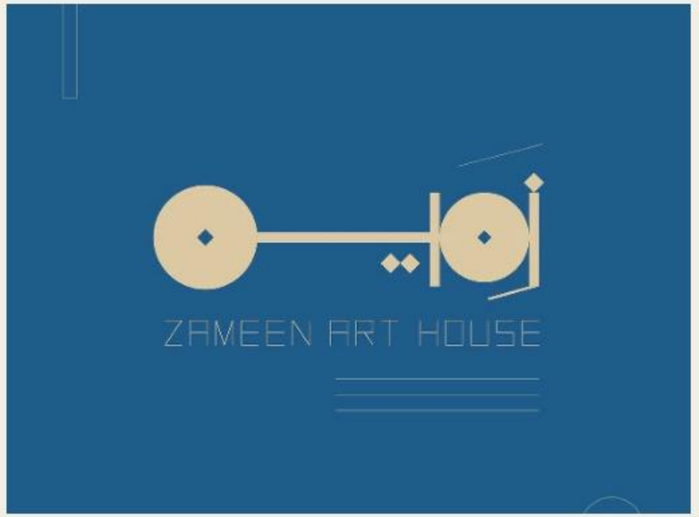

Stacked, the three words sit inside a stepped frame — like rooms in a floor plan — which lets the lockup fit corners and edges of a layout.

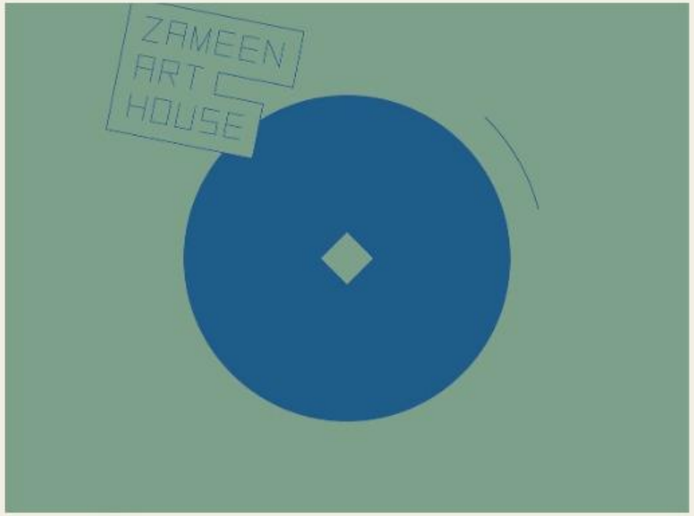

Stacked lockup in its frame

With diamonds as a field

Primary lockup: logotype over wordmark

Tilted, as a stamp

07 — COLOUR

Soil, leaf and water

Earth

The colour of the name: dry soil, clay and sun-baked brick — the ground everything is planted in. Used for the mark on dark grounds.

#DCC8A3
RGB 220 200 163

Sage

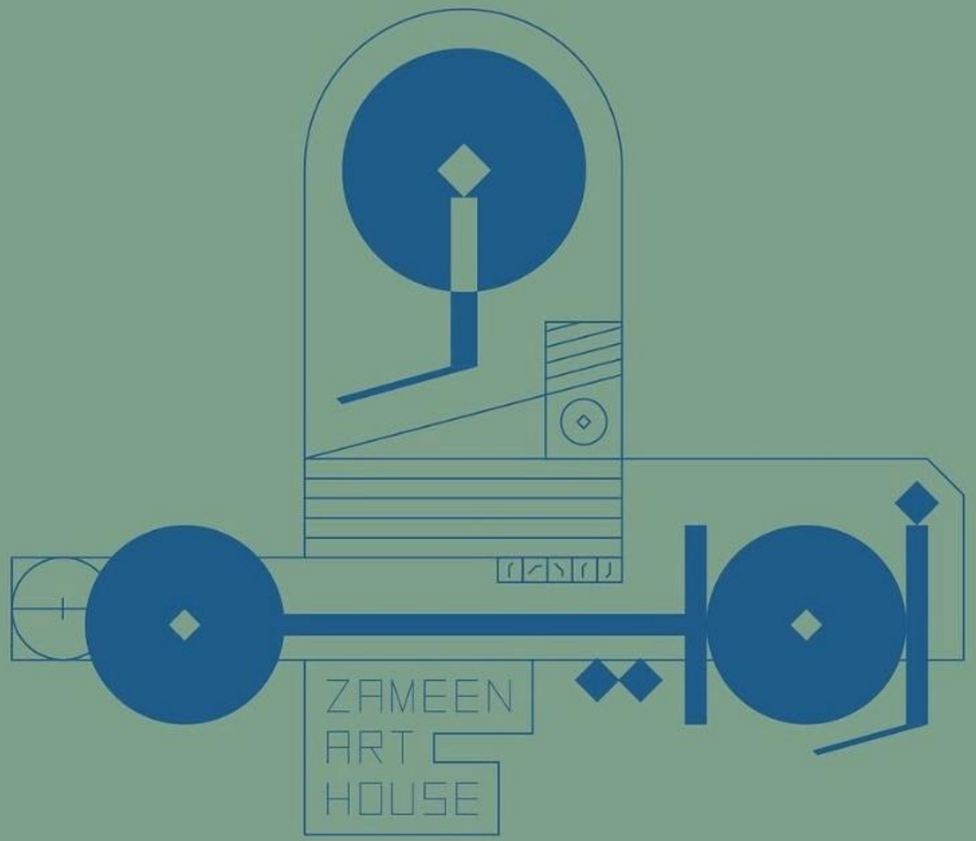

What grows from the earth. A muted, greyed green — the forests around Vancouver — so it reads as calm rather than loud.

#7DA08B
RGB 125 160 139

Pacific blue

Water and sky: the coast of British Columbia, and the deep blue of Persian tilework. The anchor colour, carrying most layouts.

#1E5C8A
RGB 30 92 138

08 — GRAPHIC LANGUAGE

Drawn like a plan

Around the solid shapes runs a second layer of hairlines: guide lines, small circles, rows of boxes, corners and frames. They look like the construction lines of an architect's drawing — a house still being built.

This layer is what makes the system flexible. Any post can be built from the same kit: one solid form, a few thin lines, generous empty space.

SOLID	Circles, diamonds and strokes — the letters
LINE	Hairline guides, frames and corners
SPACE	At least half of every layout left empty

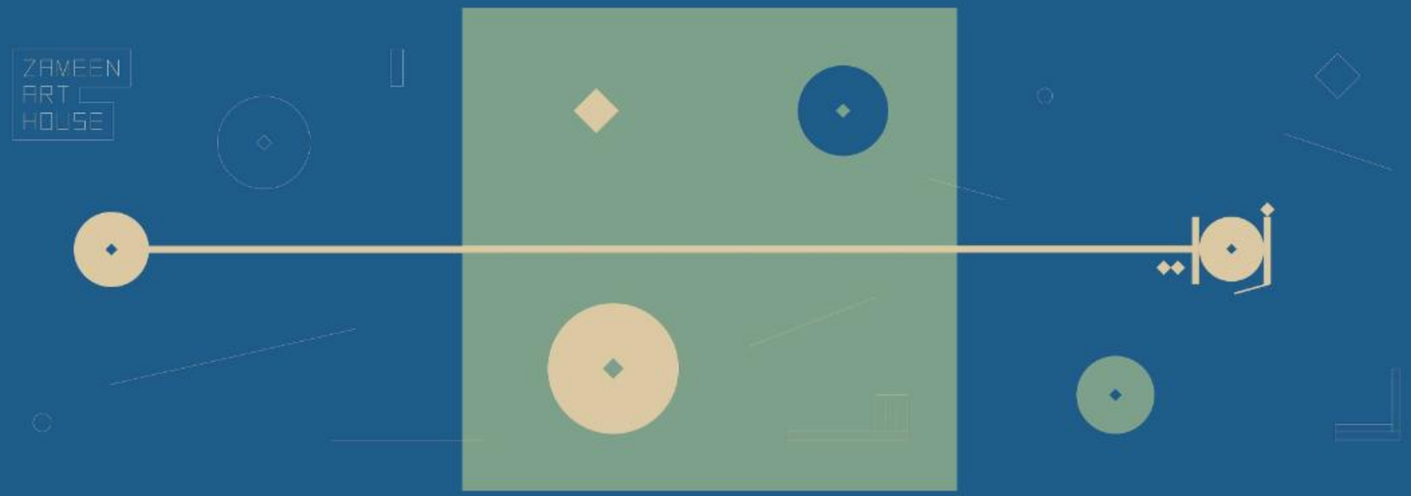

09 — THREE POSTS, ONE LINE

The keshideh, stretched across the grid

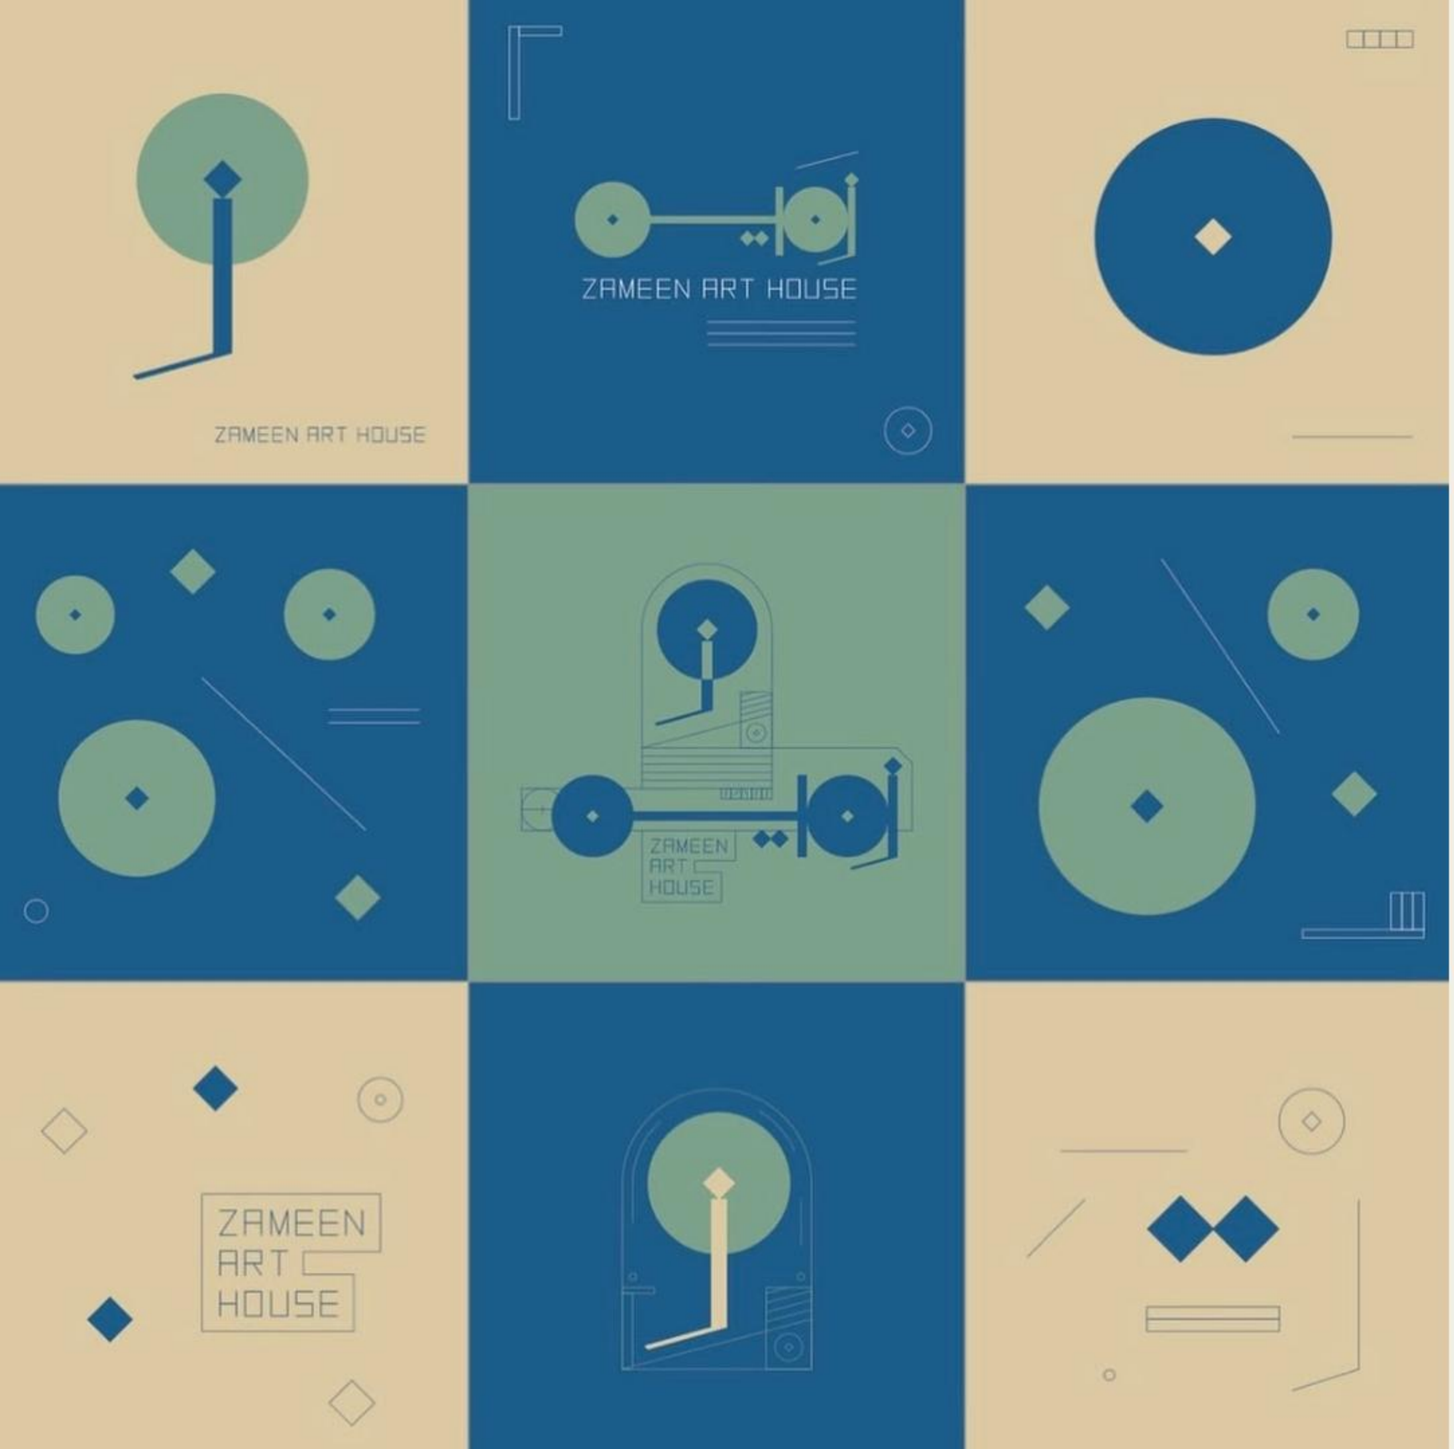

In Persian calligraphy, the keshideh can stretch a word to fill a line. Here it stretches the logo across three Instagram posts: the nun on the first, the long stroke through the second, the rest of the word on the third. Seen one by one they are three abstract compositions; seen together on the profile, the word زمین appears.

As posted — three separate tiles

Joined — one continuous image

10 — INSTAGRAM

A grid that works as a whole

The launch grid alternates the three colours like a checkerboard — earth, blue, sage — so the profile reads as one composed surface. Each tile repeats a single idea from the system: the symbol, the logotype, a disc, a field of diamonds, the stacked wordmark, the arch.

RHYTHM	Colours alternate tile by tile
CONTENT	One element of the system per post

THANK YOU

Zameen Art House

زمین

CLIENT	Zameen Art House, Vancouver, British Columbia
DESIGNER	Setayesh Ganji
ROLE	Complete brand identity, from concept to final system
SCOPE	Persian logotype, symbol, Latin wordmark, colour, graphic language, social media

