A logo drawn from the table

The identity of Social Cafe starts with its furniture: the long blue table and the chairs around it, seen from above.

BEFORE YOU START

How to read this file

Seventeen boards in four parts. The story follows how the identity was made: first the table, then the forms taken from it, then the language built from those forms, then everything it touches in the café.

01 – 03

Introduction

The café, the brief and the idea behind the whole identity.

04 – 08

From table to logo

How a piece of furniture became the mark, the logotype and the colours.

09 – 12

The language

Pattern, icons, stickers and the café's voice.

13 – 17

In the café

Menus, price tags, cups, bags, cards, signage and uniforms.

01 — THE BRIEF

A café built around one long table

Social Cafe opened in Tehran in 2021 and is still open today. Its name is its idea: a place where people sit together. The heart of the space is a long, rounded blue table where strangers share one surface, with chairs gathered around it.

The table and chairs were designed for the café, and the identity was designed alongside them. Instead of inventing a symbol, the logo takes the furniture itself — so the brand on a cup, a bag or a sign is the same thing guests sit at.

SCOPE	Logo and symbol, Persian and Latin logotype, colour, pattern, icons, stickers, menus, packaging, stationery, signage, uniforms

02 — THE IDEA

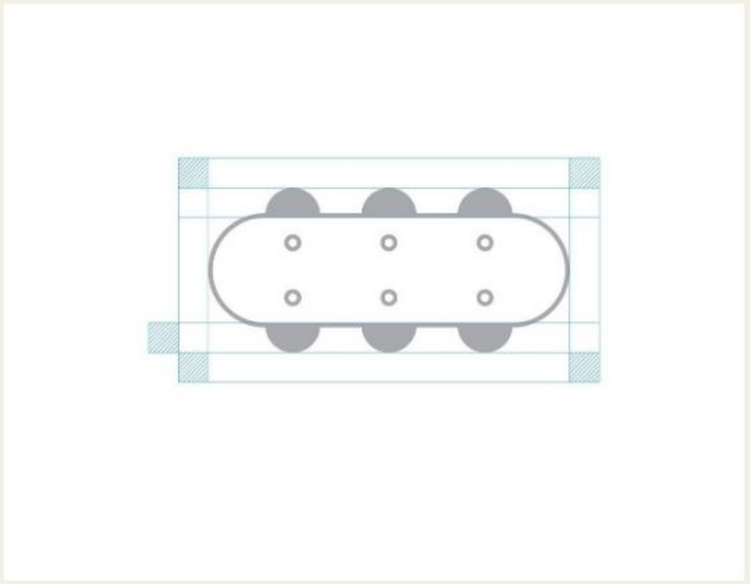

From table to logo

01

The table

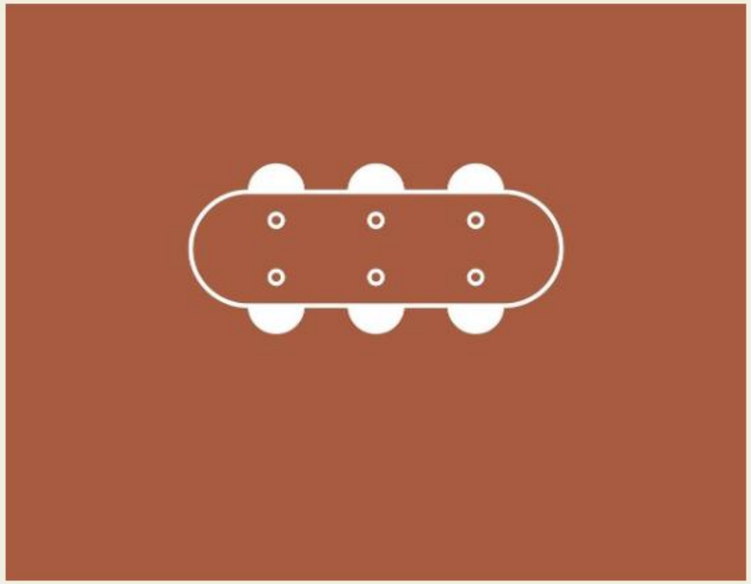

A long table with rounded ends, lacquered blue, and orange chairs around both sides.

02

Seen from above

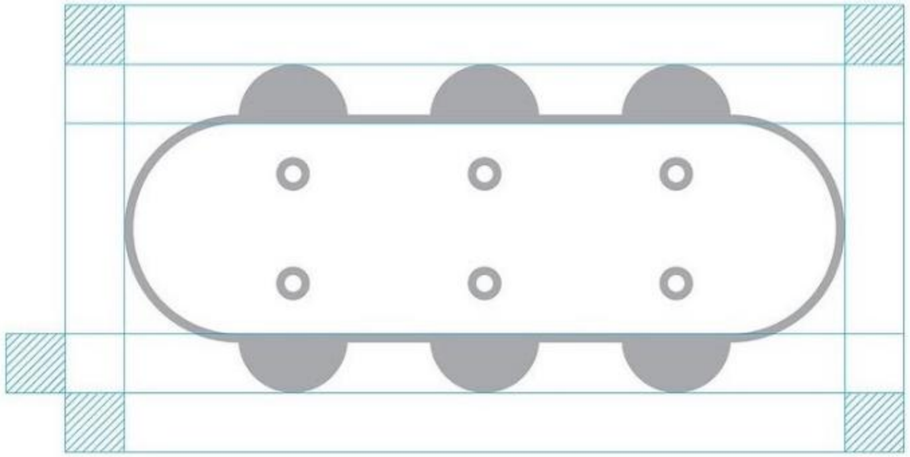

The table becomes a stadium shape; the chair backs become half circles, three on each side, set on a strict grid.

03

The mark

Six seats, six small circles for six cups. A table that is already full — a small picture of being social.

03 — THE MARK

Built with a compass

The mark uses only two shapes, both taken from the furniture: the stadium (a rectangle closed by two half circles) for the table, and the half circle for each chair back.

Everything sits on one grid. The chairs are spaced at the same rhythm as the seats; the six small rings line up with them, one place for each guest. The heavy, rounded forms keep the friendliness of real, sat-on furniture rather than a sharp corporate symbol.

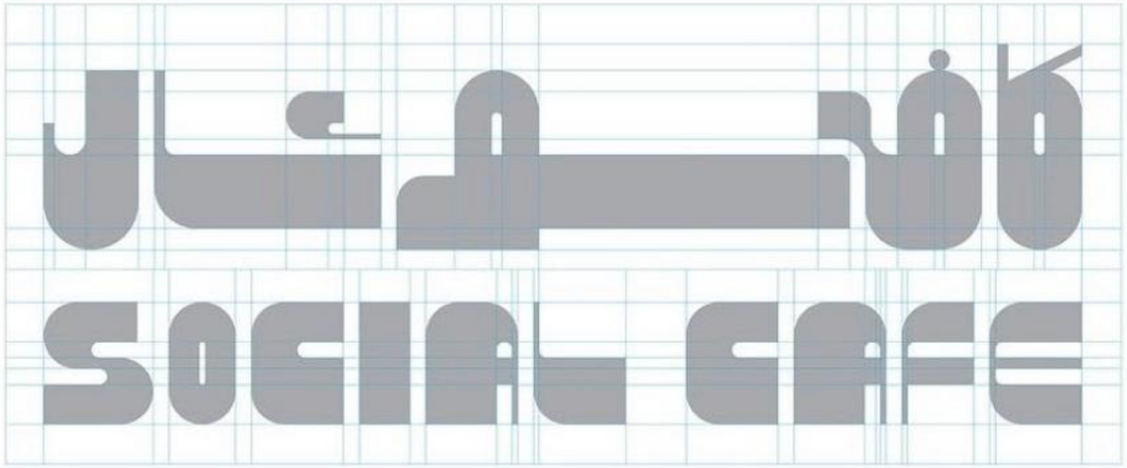

TABLE	Stadium — rectangle plus two half circles
CHAIRS	Six half circles, three per side
PLACES	Six small rings, one per seat

04 — LOGOTYPE

Two scripts, one set of furniture

The Persian name, کافه سوشال, and the Latin SOCIAL CAFE are drawn as one pair on the same grid. Both use heavy strokes with rounded ends — the same thickness as the table edge — and the counters of the letters echo the half circles of the chairs.

In the Persian line, the long stroke between the words stretches like the tabletop itself: one long surface with letters gathered at each end.

05 — LOCKUPS

One family of logos

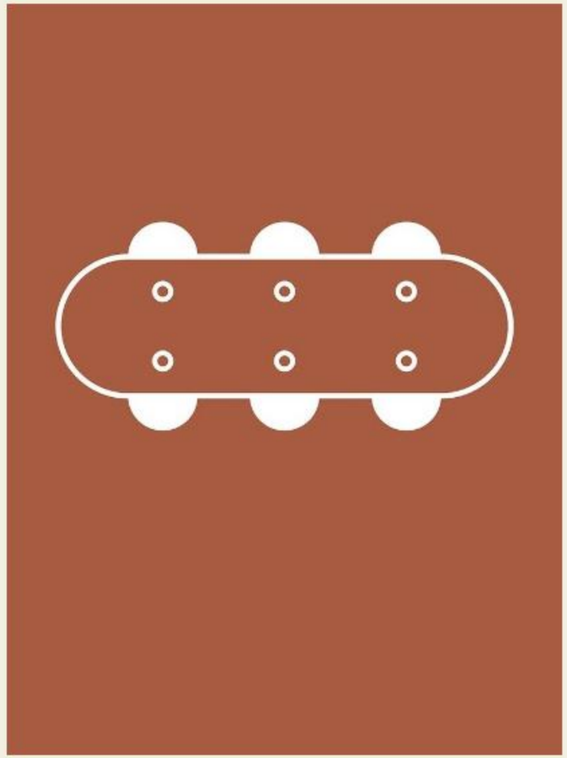

Primary — terracotta on blue

Reversed — cream on blue

Stacked — mark over logotype

Mark alone — for small spaces

06 — COLOUR

Colours taken from the room

Table blue

The deep lacquered blue of the communal table — the colour guests sit at. The anchor of the brand.

Chair terracotta

The orange of the chairs, warmed and toned down so it prints well and sits like baked clay next to the blue.

#A75B40
RGB 167 91 64

Cup cream

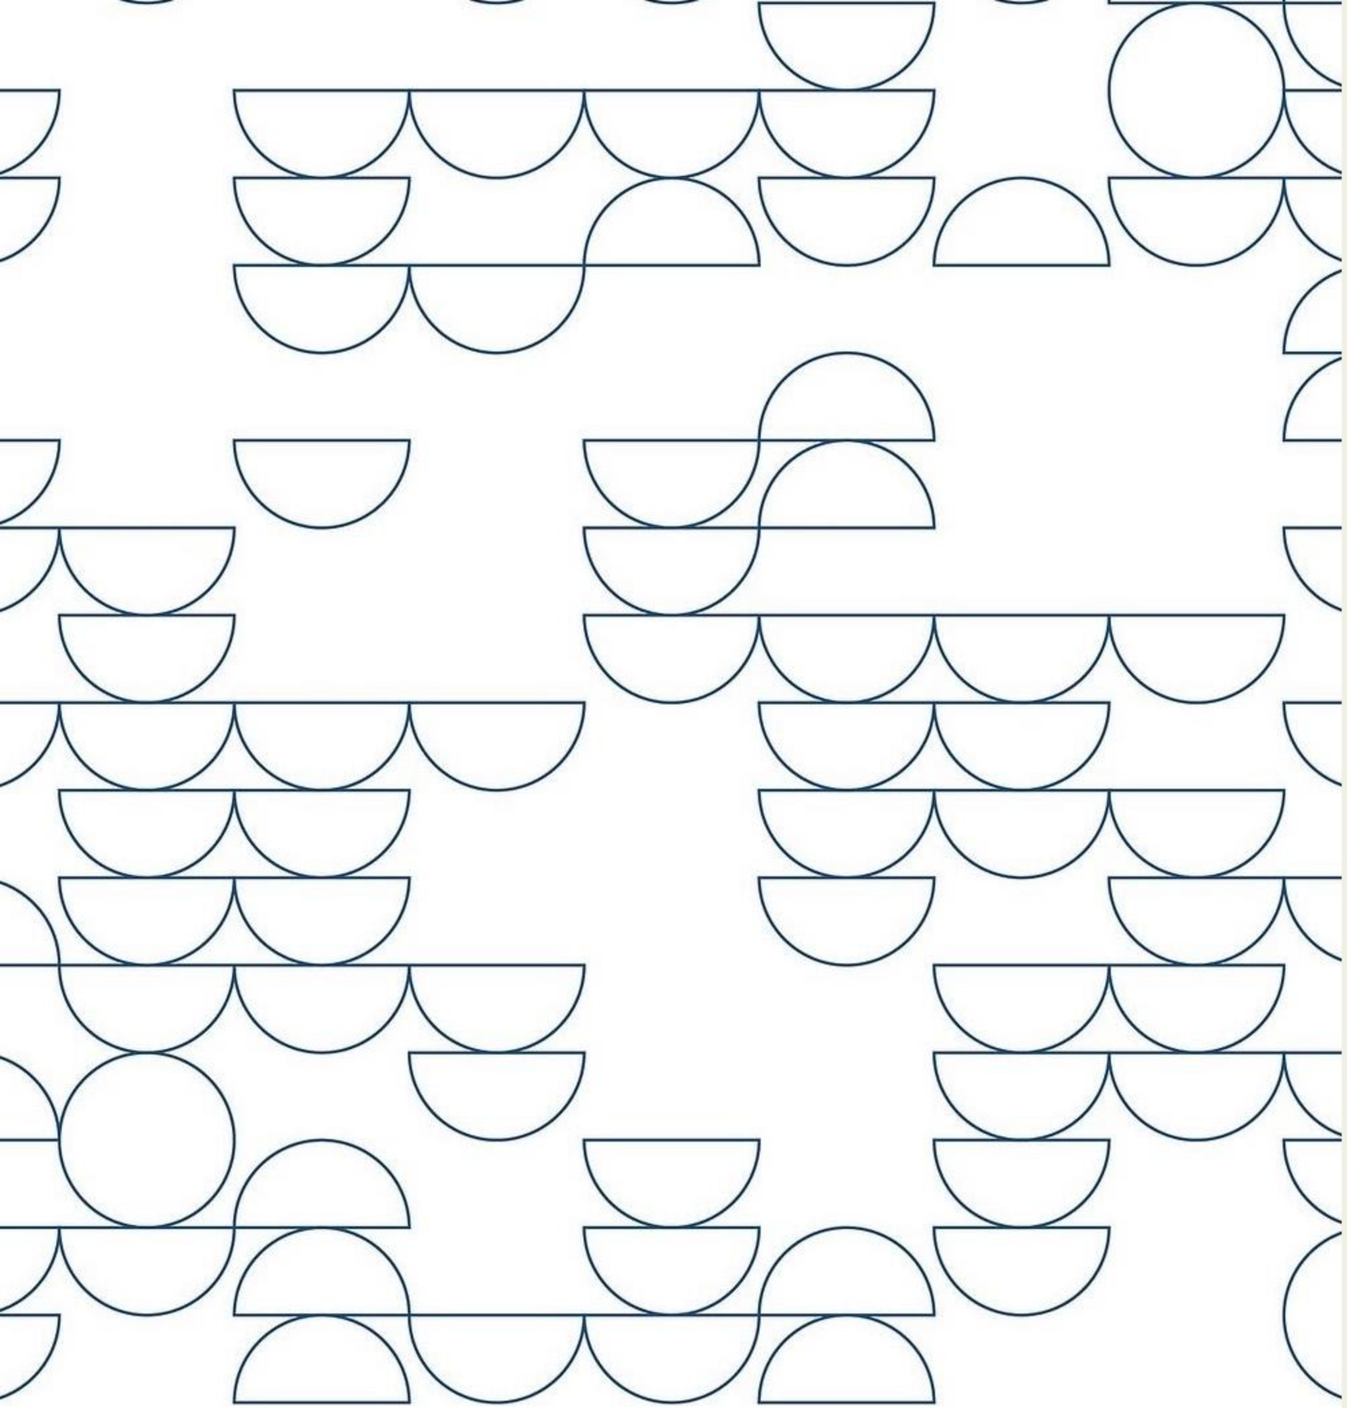

Milk foam and paper: the light ground for menus, sleeves and cards.

#F2F0E2
RGB 242 240 226

Plaster stone

The soft grey of the café's plaster and concrete walls, for a quieter background.

07 — PATTERN

A room full of chairs

The pattern takes the half circle of the chair back and repeats it — rows of seats, pulled in and pushed out, like a busy café seen from the ceiling. Where two half circles meet they close into a full circle: two people sitting face to face.

Drawn in a single thin line, it can sit behind text on labels and sleeves without competing with the heavy logo.

08 — ICONS

Every icon sits at the table

The menu icons — croissant, bread, toast, sandwich, salad, egg, cup — are drawn in the same rounded line and placed inside the two shapes of the logo: the circle of a chair and the long pill of the table. On the menu, each category literally sits on the brand.

The tall hang tags take the arched end of the table and turn it upright.

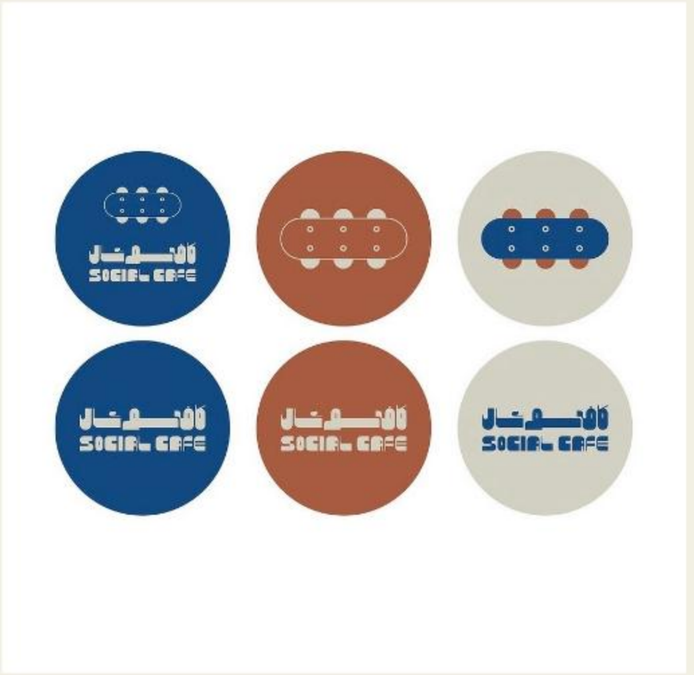

09 — STICKERS

Round seals for everything

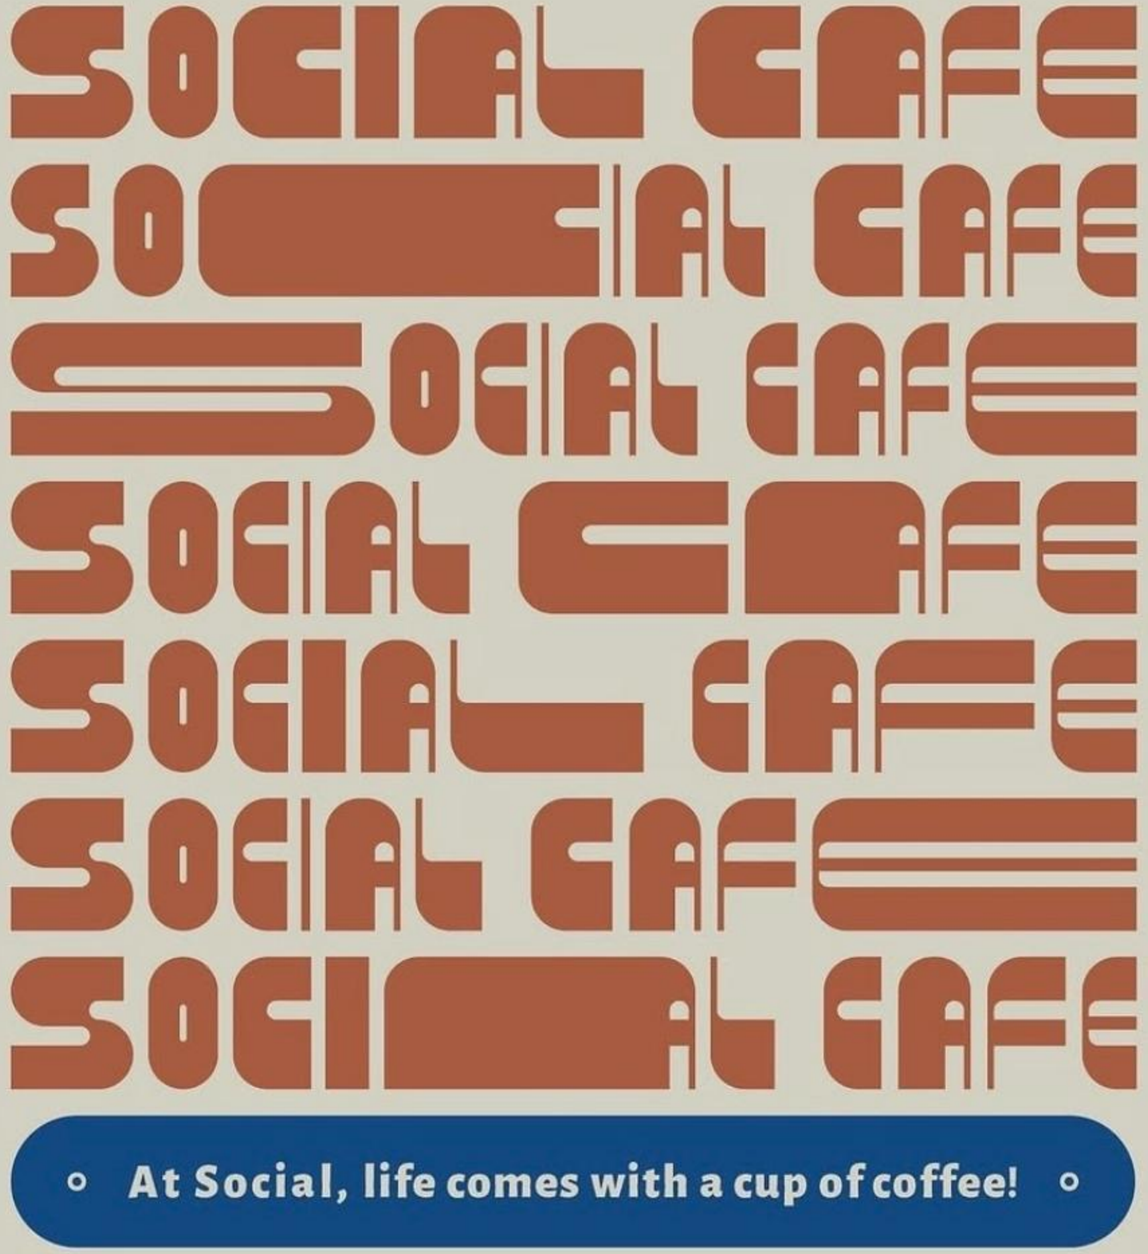

Round stickers close bags, cups and boxes. They rotate the mark, the Persian and Latin logotypes and a playful face drawn from the mark, across the three main colours.

Logo, mark and face

Logotype seals in three colours

10 — VOICE

Talking like a friend at the table

The tone is warm and direct. Every line ends at the same place — "at Social" — and the word Social is often circled, like a name pointed out across a room.

"At Social, life comes with a cup of coffee!"

"If you can't find your vibe, find it at Social."

"Savor the taste of life at Social."

"Create your special moments at Social."

"Life is an adventure, let's experience it together."

11 — MENU & PRICE TAGS

Menus and price tags

The menus are framed in the table's arched shape, with Persian headings and prices in the brand's colours. Small folded price cards stand next to each pastry, in blue or cream.

Menu, folded and open

Price cards — one continuous photo

12 — PACKAGING

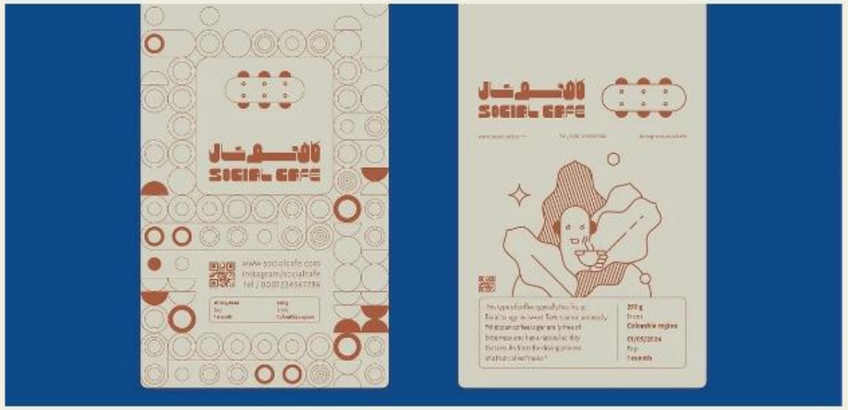

Cups, bags and coffee

Cup sleeves in cream, terracotta and blue

Takeaway bag and coffee pouch

Coffee bean label — front and back

13 — CARDS

Cards to take home

Business cards in all three colours: the logotype on one side, a line in the café's voice and contact details on the other, with the dot grid of the mark as a quiet texture.

14 — IN THE SPACE

The table, everywhere

Storefront — the mark as a blue sign

Counter and the blue door

Uniform — the mark on a bandana

Door — the table's rounded end
