Hamloqmeh

هم‌لقمه

Good food from today, at a big end-of-day discount.

A food-saving platform that connects people with bakeries, restaurants and supermarkets selling their surplus food at reduced prices — and the Persian, right-to-left website that introduces it.

02 — BEFORE YOU BEGIN

What this file shows

Hamloqmeh asks people to try something new: buying good food that a shop didn't sell in time. This file shows how the identity and website make that idea feel clear, fair and welcoming — first the brief, then the brand, then the website page by page.

The site is in Persian. Translations sit beside the screens so the decisions can be read in English.

Persian, then English

Every Persian line shown is followed by its English translation in grey.

The site is RTL: the start of each layout is on the right.

03 — THE CHALLENGE

Explain a service nobody has used yet

Hamloqmeh brings two everyday needs together: businesses want to waste less, and people want good food to cost less. The website had to introduce that idea to a Persian-speaking audience for the first time — and turn interest into a sign-up before the product launches.

For food businesses

Good food left at the end of the selling day — and a chance to sell it instead of wasting it.

For people

Good food at a fair price — bought as a smart choice, not a favour.

GOAL Bring customers and businesses onto one waitlist, ahead of wider product testing.

THREE QUESTIONS THE SITE MUST ANSWER

01 What is it?

A marketplace for surplus food from local shops, at a big discount.

02 How does it work?

Discover a daily bag, reserve it, pick it up in person.

03 Why take part?

Savings and new local favourites for customers; extra income and new customers for businesses.

Design principles: readable Persian typography, a clear hierarchy, and a welcoming tone that treats surplus food with respect.

04 — NAME & MARK

Sharing a bite

هم together + لقمه a mouthful

“Hamloqmeh” means sharing a bite of food with someone — the simple feeling that, in Iranian culture, has always belonged to the sofreh, hospitality and empathy. The name describes what the platform builds: a bridge between good food left at the end of the day and the person happy to choose it.

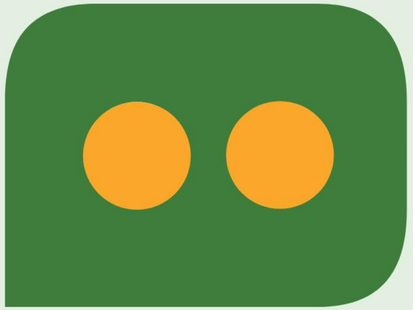

The symbol is built on the Persian letter ه (h) — the first letter of the name. Its two counters become two amber circles: two portions, side by side.

The letter ه · Vazirmatn Black

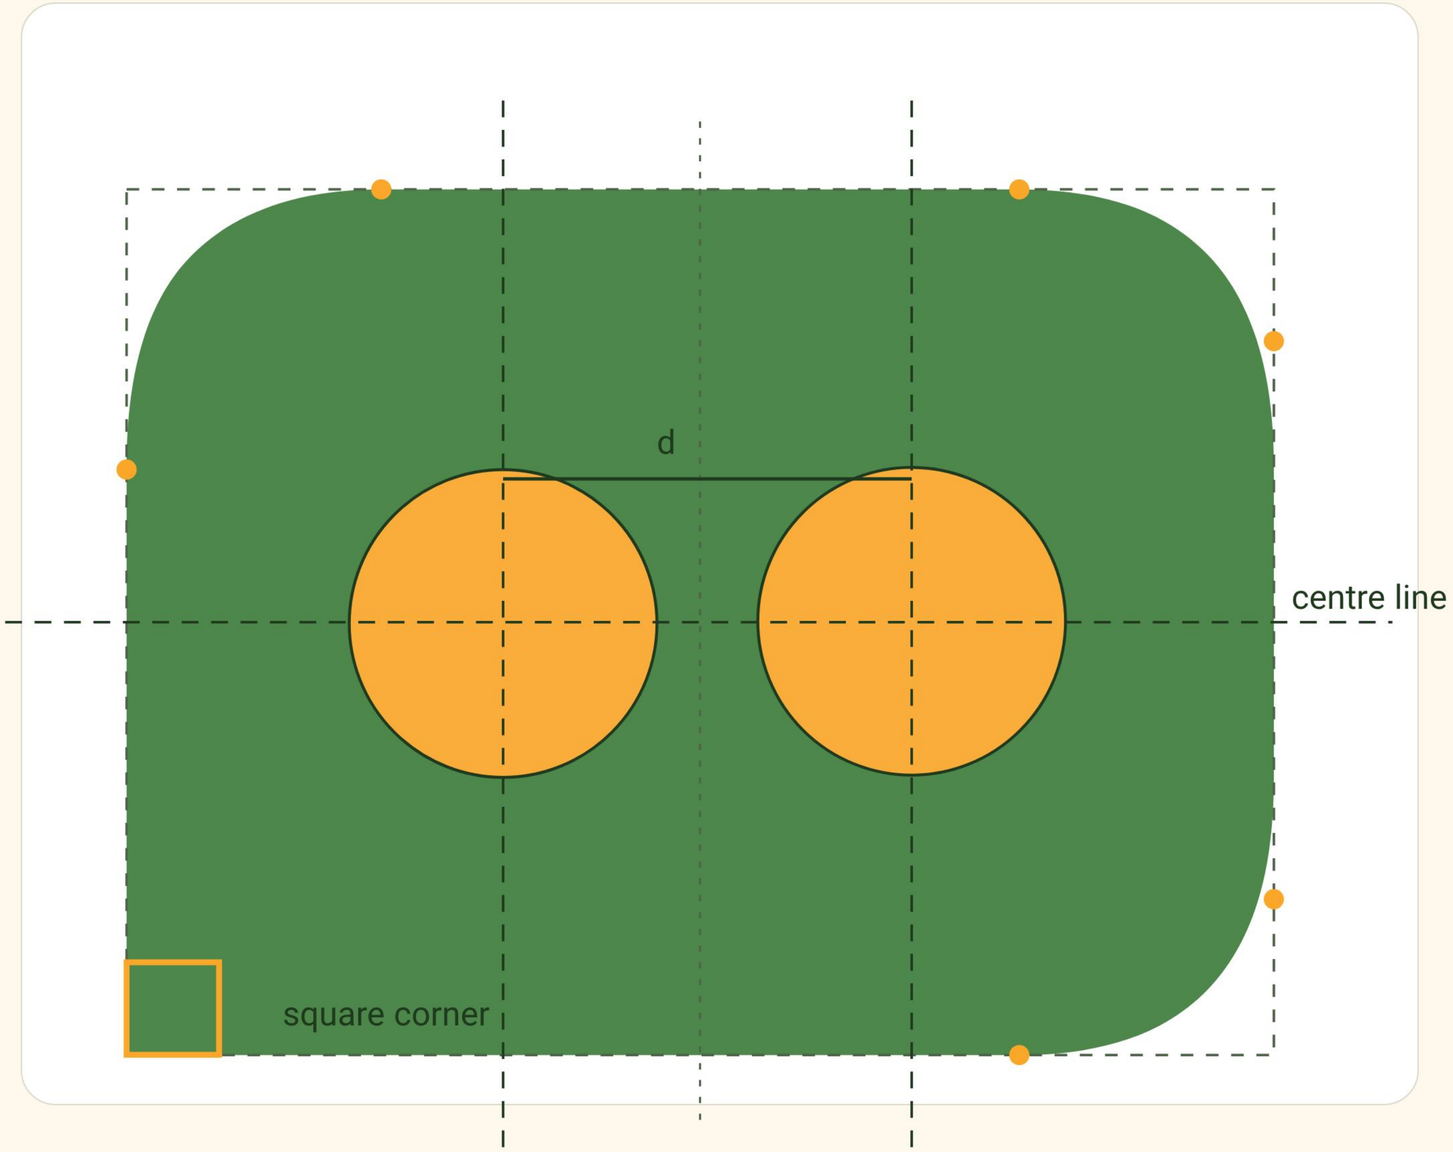

Its two-eyed form, هه

THE SYMBOL

A solid green block holds the two counters; the amber circles glow inside them like two warm loaves.

05 — LOGO CONSTRUCTION

Two circles on one line

The mark is simple enough to work as a favicon and an app icon, and exact enough to be redrawn: every part hangs off one centre line and two equal circles.

PROPORTION	273 × 206 — close to 4 : 3
CIRCLES	Two equal circles, Ø ≈ 0.36 of the height, centred on the horizontal midline
SPACING	Circle centres 97 units apart; gap between circles ≈ ⅓ of a diameter
CORNERS	Three soft, squircle-like corners — one square corner at bottom-left, like the base of the letter
COUNTERS	The green holes sit just inside the amber circles, so each circle reads as lit from within

06 — COLOUR

Fresh, warm, never cheap

Deep greens from the bakery shelf and an amber like a warm crust. There is no sale-sticker red anywhere: surplus food is presented as good food first, a bargain second.

Cream and leaf-tint backgrounds alternate down every page, so long Persian text breaks into calm, readable bands.

07 — TYPOGRAPHY

One family does everything. Vazirmatn is drawn for Persian, reads comfortably at small sizes and has a true Black weight for headlines — heavy, friendly letters that match the solid shape of the logo.

HEADLINE	Black 900 · 56 px · line height 1.28
SECTION	Black 900 · 48 px
BODY	Regular 400 · generous line height for Persian diacritics
NUMERALS	Persian digits throughout — ۱ ۲ ۳, ۰۹۱۲…

08 — STRUCTURE

Eight pages, one destination

Every page answers one question in depth, and every page ends in the same place: the waitlist. A single persistent button in the header — “Join the waitlist” — keeps that goal one click away throughout.

09 — THE HOMEPAGE

One page, one story

The homepage is written as an argument, top to bottom. It makes a promise, names the problem, explains the mechanics, speaks to both audiences, gives the reason it matters, clears up doubts — and only then asks for a sign-up.

Every section answers the question the previous one raises, so the visitor reaches the form already convinced.

01	Promise	Today's good food, at a big end-of-day discount.
02	Problem	The end of the selling day isn't the end of good food.
03	How it works	Discover · reserve · pick up.
04	Who it's for	Customers on one card, businesses on the other.
05	Who can join	Bakery, café, restaurant, supermarket, pastry shop, greengrocer.
06	Why it matters	Water, energy and effort that pay off — plus three values.
07	Questions	Three common questions answered on the spot.
08	Join	The waitlist form, then the footer.

TRANSLATION “Today's good food, with a big end-of-day discount. Hamloqmeh brings you surplus quality food from bakeries, cafés, restaurants and supermarkets at the end of the selling day, at a great discount.”

10 — HERO

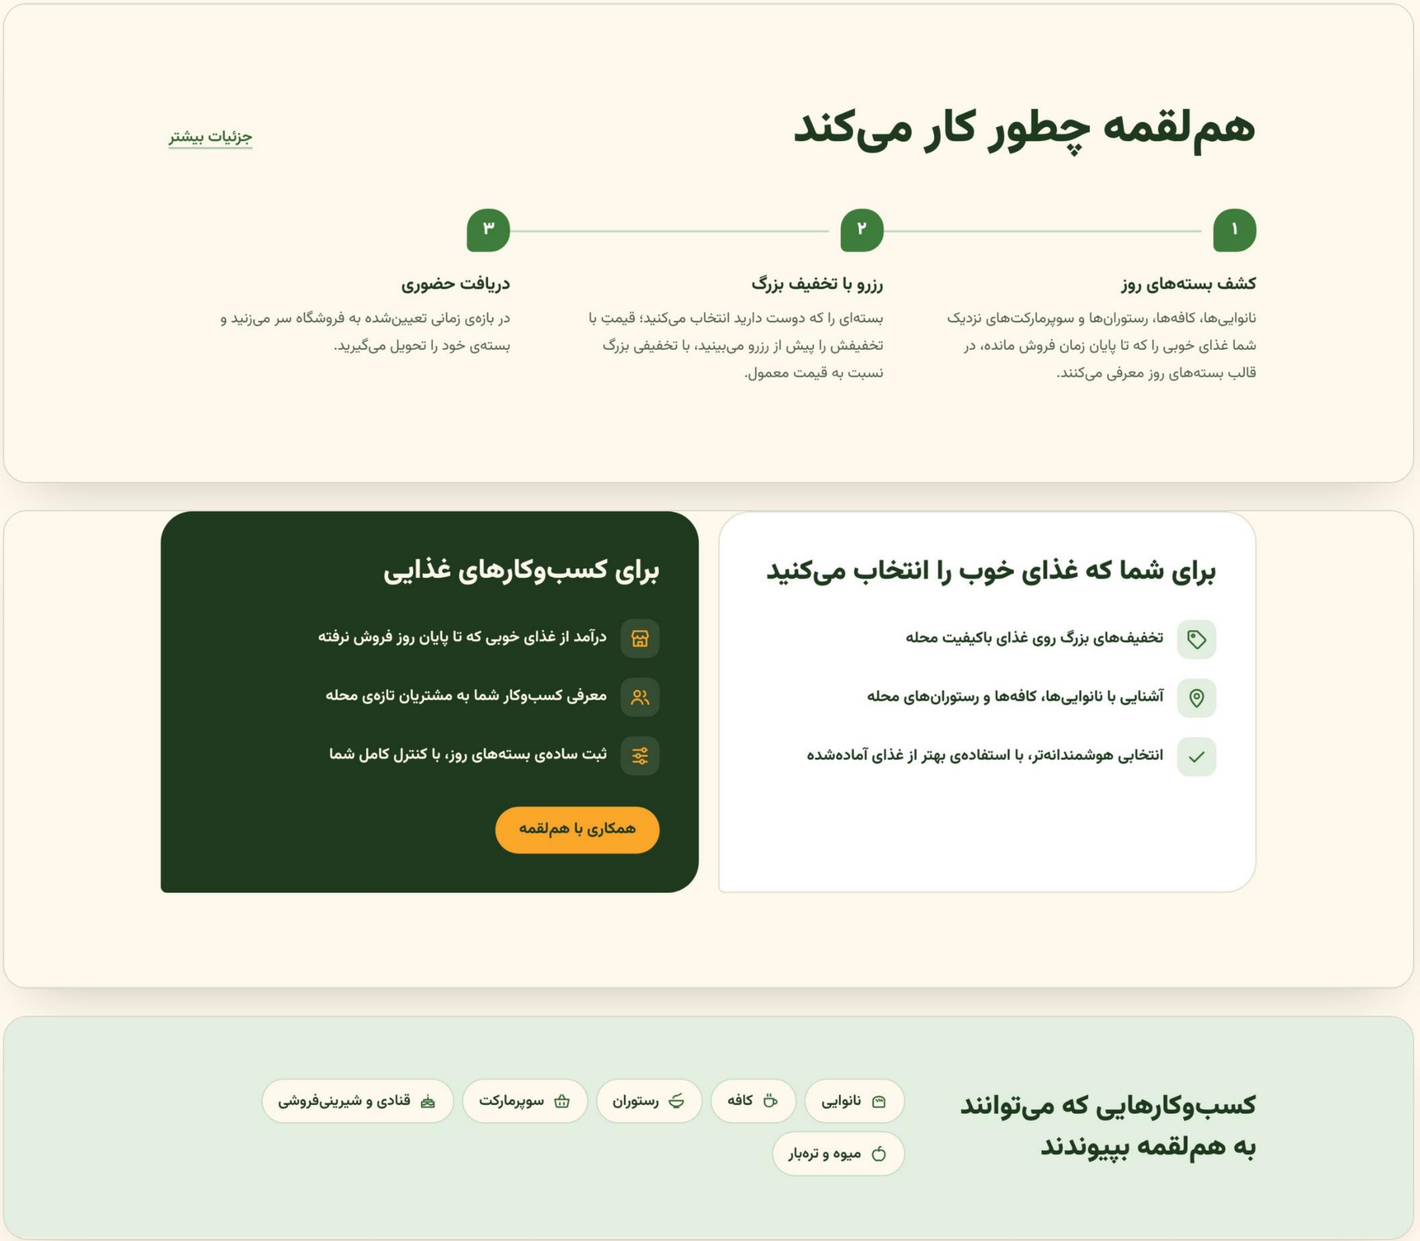

A promise and a preview

1. “In pilot phase”
   A small amber badge sets expectations honestly: the service is coming, not live.
   در مرحله آزمایشی

2. Headline as a benefit
   Leads with good food, then the discount — quality first, price second.

3. One call to action
   “Join the waitlist”, with a reassurance line underneath: be the first to hear about big discounts.

4. The product in three cards
   Instead of a stock photo, three stacked cards preview the real flow: a daily bakery bag is available, it's reserved with a special discount, it's picked up in person in a set time window.

11 — HOW IT WORKS

Three steps, two audiences

1 Discover · Reserve · Pick up

Numbered steps on a single line, read right to left. The discounted price is shown before reserving — no surprises.

کشف بسته‌های روز · رزرو با تخفیف بزرگ · دریافت حضوری

2 Two cards, two tones

Customers get a light card; food businesses a dark forest card with an amber “Partner with Hamloqmeh” button — so each audience finds its own entry point.

3 Benefits as plain promises

Big discounts on neighbourhood food · get to know local shops · a smarter choice. For businesses: income from unsold food · new local customers · full control.

4 Who can join, as chips

Bakery, café, restaurant, supermarket, pastry shop, greengrocer — each with a small line icon.

12 — FOR BUSINESSES

Give today's good food a second chance

The partner page speaks to bakery and café owners in their own terms: income, new customers, no extra paperwork — and the decision stays theirs.

1 Four reasons

A second sale for good food · new customers · a simple process with no admin · you decide what, at what price, and when.

2 Four-step process

Request → review and coordination → publish daily bags → reservations and in-person pickup. A note says requesting creates no commitment.

3 What a daily bag contains

An expandable answer: a short description, the price set by the business, the pickup window.

13 — TRUST

Dignity before discount

Discounted surplus food can feel like charity. The copy works against that: it calls the purchase “a smart choice, not a favour”, explains prices before anyone asks, and answers doubts openly.

هر بسته‌ای که انتخاب می‌شود، یعنی آب، انرژی و زحمتی که برای آن غذا صرف شده، به نتیجه رسیده است.

“Every bag that's chosen means the water, energy and effort that went into that food has paid off.”

1. Values
   Dignity · transparency · better use of food.

2. FAQ in three groups
   About Hamloqmeh · daily bags · waitlist and partnership — nine questions in all.

FAQ with two answers open · About: why it matters · our values

14 — WAITLIST

One form for both audiences

1 One contact field

“Email or mobile number — one is enough”, with a Persian-digit example. Half the friction of two required fields.

2 Customer / food business

A segmented control. Choosing “food business” reveals one extra field: the business name.

3 Clear consent

An explicit checkbox explains the data is only used for launch news and, for businesses, partnership — with a link to the privacy page.

4 Helpful errors

A summary line plus a message under each field, in plain Persian.

5 No CAPTCHA

A hidden honeypot field filters bots without adding a puzzle for people.

16 — OUTCOME

Ready for its first bite

Hamloqmeh is live as a complete Persian website: a brand, eight pages and a waitlist that brings customers and food businesses into the same queue — ready for the first neighbourhoods to test the service.
